

Athlete Code of Conduct

As an athlete representing my Country and National Association and competing in the World Transplant Games, I pledge that my conduct will reflect the highest level of sportsmanship, respect and decorum and that I will also respect the rights, dignity and worth of my fellow competitors and officials without bias to race, religion or gender.

I pledge to:

- Ensure my fitness to participate in the WTG by following a regular training program or activity prior to and during the WTG;
- Know and play by the rules of my sports and to respect the judgment and the decisions of the officials;
- Compete with honesty, fairness, and with a spirit of justice at all times while showing respect towards officials, volunteers, my fellow competitors and spectators;
- At all times, be honest about possible illness or injury which may influence my health and ability to participate and to declare such situation to the officials. I understand that this may cause me to be withdrawn from some or all events to ensure my own safety and for the protection of my health;
- Refrain from self-medication to enhance my performance in any way or to suppress possible symptoms of illness.

I understand that to be a participant at the WTG, I am required to respect not only the written rules but also the unwritten rules of sport participation. In so doing I should attach more importance to the playing of the game than the winning of the game; to voluntarily renounce any advantage I may have gained without strict adherence to the rules.

I understand that if I compromise this pledge, I may be subject to disqualification from this and possibly other sports-related events. Such disqualification will follow the Disciplinary Process as set out in the Articles of Association and Bylaws of the WTGF.
